The UI for adding courses has three panels:

- The first panel lists the categories of courses and list of allowed courses in each category--prerequisites, core courses, domain-specific courses, and capstone project courses.
- The second panel shows the university logo, below which are drop-down boxes for selecting the category of courses and courses in each category.
- The third panel shows the button for checking eligibility and another button (Destroy Contract) for undeploying the contract. Destroy Contract is only in the test version and will not be featured in the production version of the UI.
- The blank space in the third panel of figure 11.11 is for displaying the fulfillment status of each category of courses and the GPA requirement for the DCC program.

Now if you click the Check Eligibility button before adding the courses, you'll see the screen shown in figure 11.12, which shows that none of the criteria for the certificate is satisfied. Initially, when no requirement is satisfied, all the items have X marks against them, as shown in figure 11.12. When all the requirements are met, you see check marks against them. When only some of the requirements are satisfied, the panel shows a combination of X and check marks. If all the course requirements are met, the GPA is computed, verified, and displayed. These details are shown in figure 11.12.
