Writing a book is a serious undertaking, demanding a significant investment of personal time and effort. Yet, it's a journey we embark on for a greater good, embodying the spirit that "sharing is caring." This endeavor wouldn't be possible without a strong support network, countless late nights, and an unwavering willingness to persevere.

I am immensely grateful to the team at Manning Publications. I thank Andy Waldron, my acquisitions editor, and Brian Sawyer, my former acquisitions editor, for believing in this book's concept from the very beginning and for their invaluable guidance, and Frances Lefkowitz, my development editor, for her insightful feedback and relentless commitment to shaping this manuscript. My thanks also go to Ana Romac and Aira Dučić for their support in marketing efforts. And to the entire production team, including the copy editors, proofreaders, and all those behind the scenes who polished this book into its final form: your meticulous work is truly appreciated.

Thanks also go to my technical editor, Anirudh Prabhu, and technical proofreader, Doug Warren, who painstakingly read through the drafts, providing invaluable feedback that significantly enhanced the accuracy and clarity of this book. Their expertise was critical in refining the content and ensuring its practical relevance.

A special thank you goes to Ivan Martinović and all the other technical reviewers: Aayush Bhutani, Aditi Choudhary, Akshatha Anantharamu, An Nad, Andreas Berggren, Anujkumarsinh Donvir, Anurag Lahon, Arpankumar Patel, Asaad Saad, Ayisha Tabbassum, Bruno Ricardo Santos, Bruno Sonnino, Charlie Gaines, Christopher G.
