8 You could give your friend several different sizes of cylinders, and challenge them to reveal the message by finding the one that works.

To send a message to someone far away like the Greeks did, you both need to have the same type of cylinder. You use yours to encode the message, and they use theirs to decode it.