Smoot A measurement of length equal to 1.702 m (5 ft 7 in), named after MIT student Oliver Smoot.

Square number A number that is another number multiplied by itself, such as 9 (which is 3 x 3). A square number of dots can be arranged in a square pattern.

Symmetrical A symmetrical shape that is the same on both sides—one side is a mirror image of the other.

Tangram A puzzle consisting of several smaller shapes that make up one large shape.

Tessellate A shape that can tessellate is one that tiles or fits together endlessly.

Venn diagram A type of diagram using overlapping circles to show how objects fit into different categories.

Vertical A line or shape that runs up and down, like a lamppost.

Whole number A complete number such as 3, 10, or 200, rather than a fraction or decimal number, such as 3 ½ or 3.5.