

In large teams, TypeScript improves collaboration by making code self-documenting through type annotations, reducing misunderstandings about function signatures or component props, and enforcing consistent coding practices across the team.

TypeScript integrates seamlessly with frontend libraries, making it a vital skill for modern web development. Many organizations now expect developers to be proficient in TypeScript due to its widespread use in production environments. Common scenarios include working with third-