

- `<main>` is used to wrap the main content of the page, distinguishing it from repeated content like footer. By placing the primary content—including the article—inside `<main>`, it ensures that assistive technologies and search engines can quickly identify the core content of the page. This improves accessibility for users who rely on screen