

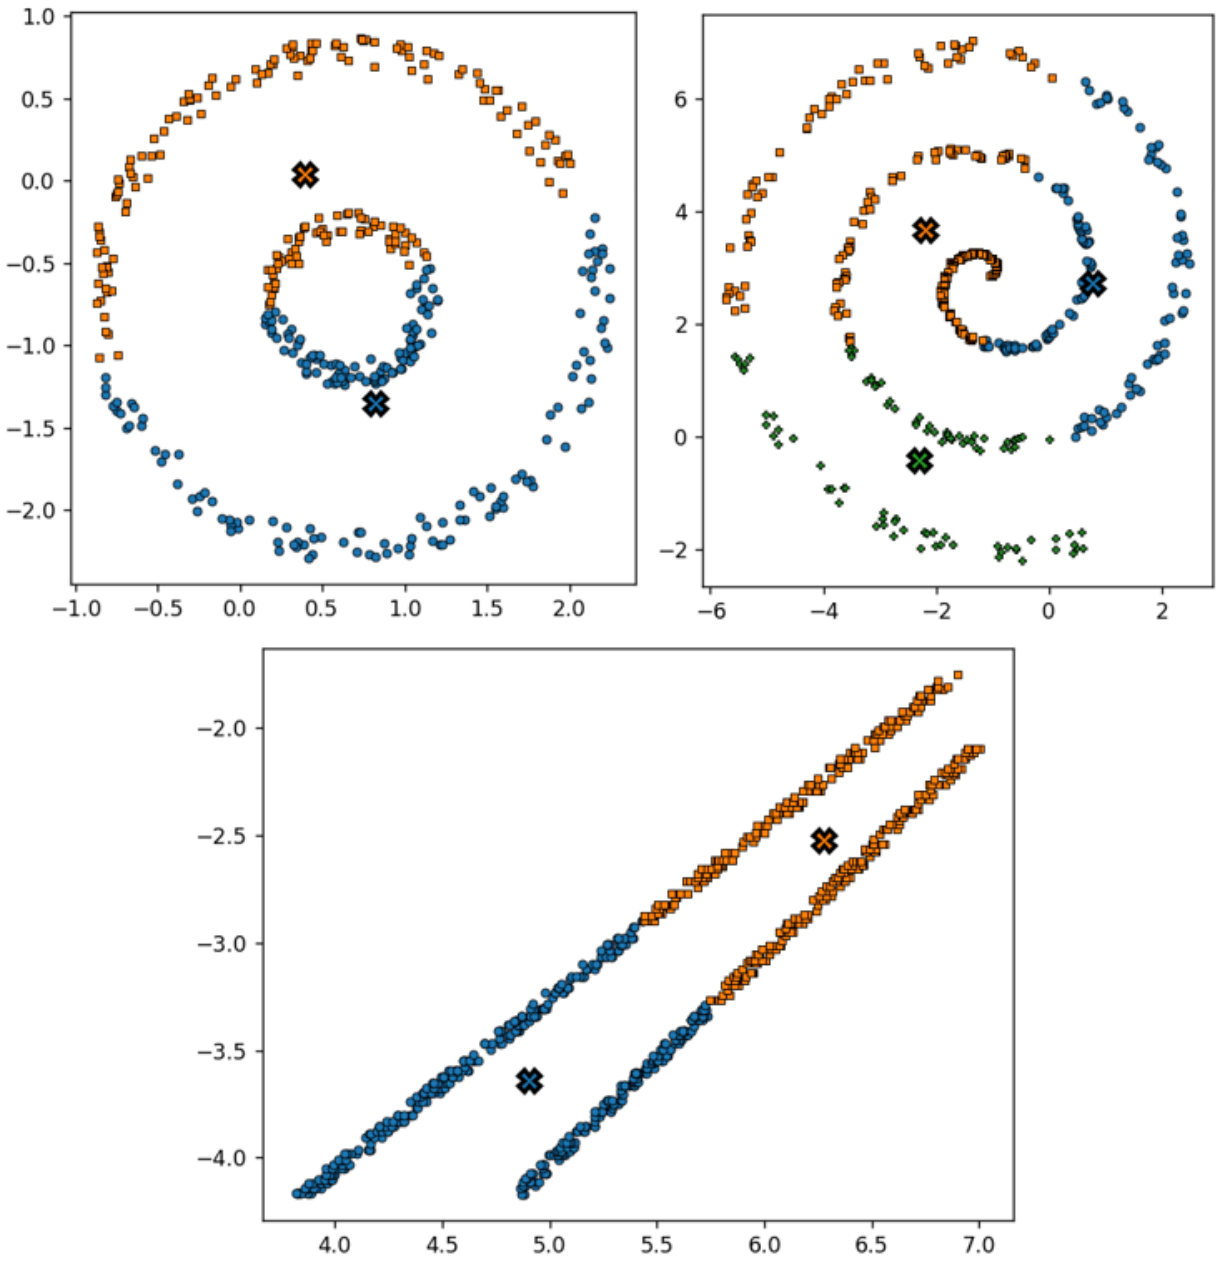

Figure 12.6 Three examples where the clustering result produced by k-means can never be optimal. (left) Two concentric rings (2 centroids). (right) A spiral (3 centroids: the optimal solution here would be having a single cluster…). (bottom) Two linear clusters close to each other.