

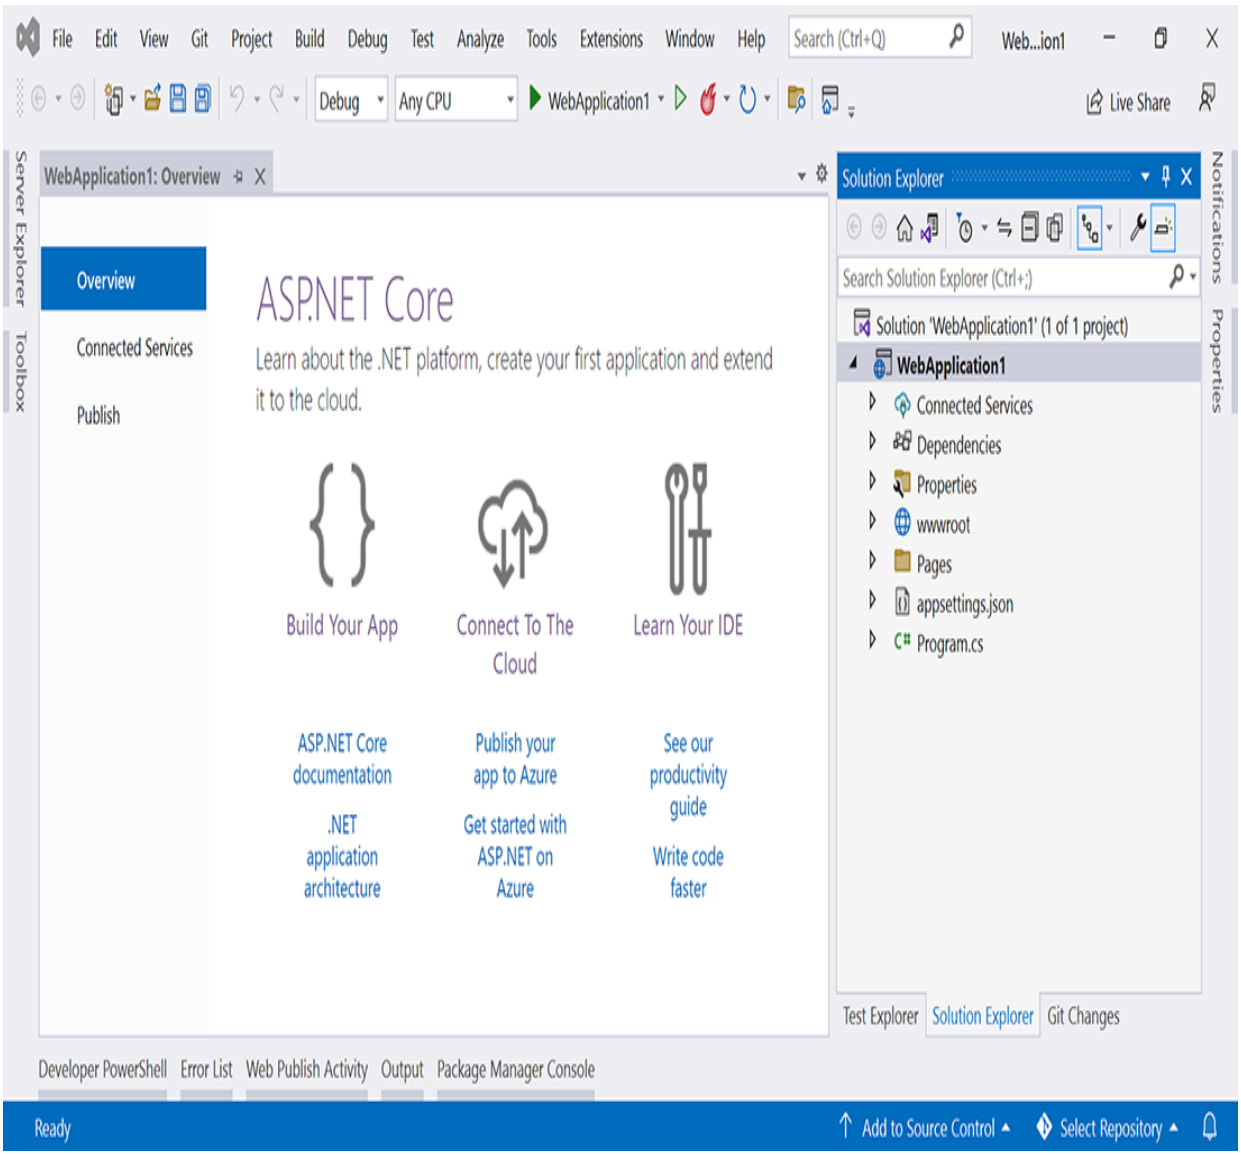

Figure 2.2 Your new application opens in Visual Studio with an overview page and the Solution Explorer window open on the right, showing the structure and contents of your WebApplication1 solution and its single project, also named WebApplication1.

Although the contents of Solution Explorer look like a file structure, not all the items that you see are actually files. We will take a closer look at these items later in the chapter.