As you've seen in previous chapters, ASP.NET Core implements Razor Page endpoints using a combination of `RoutingMiddleware` and `EndpointMiddleware`, as shown in figure 13.8. When a request has been processed by earlier middleware (and assuming that none has handled the request and short-circuited the pipeline), the routing middleware selects which Razor Page handler should be executed, and the endpoint middleware executes the page handler.