

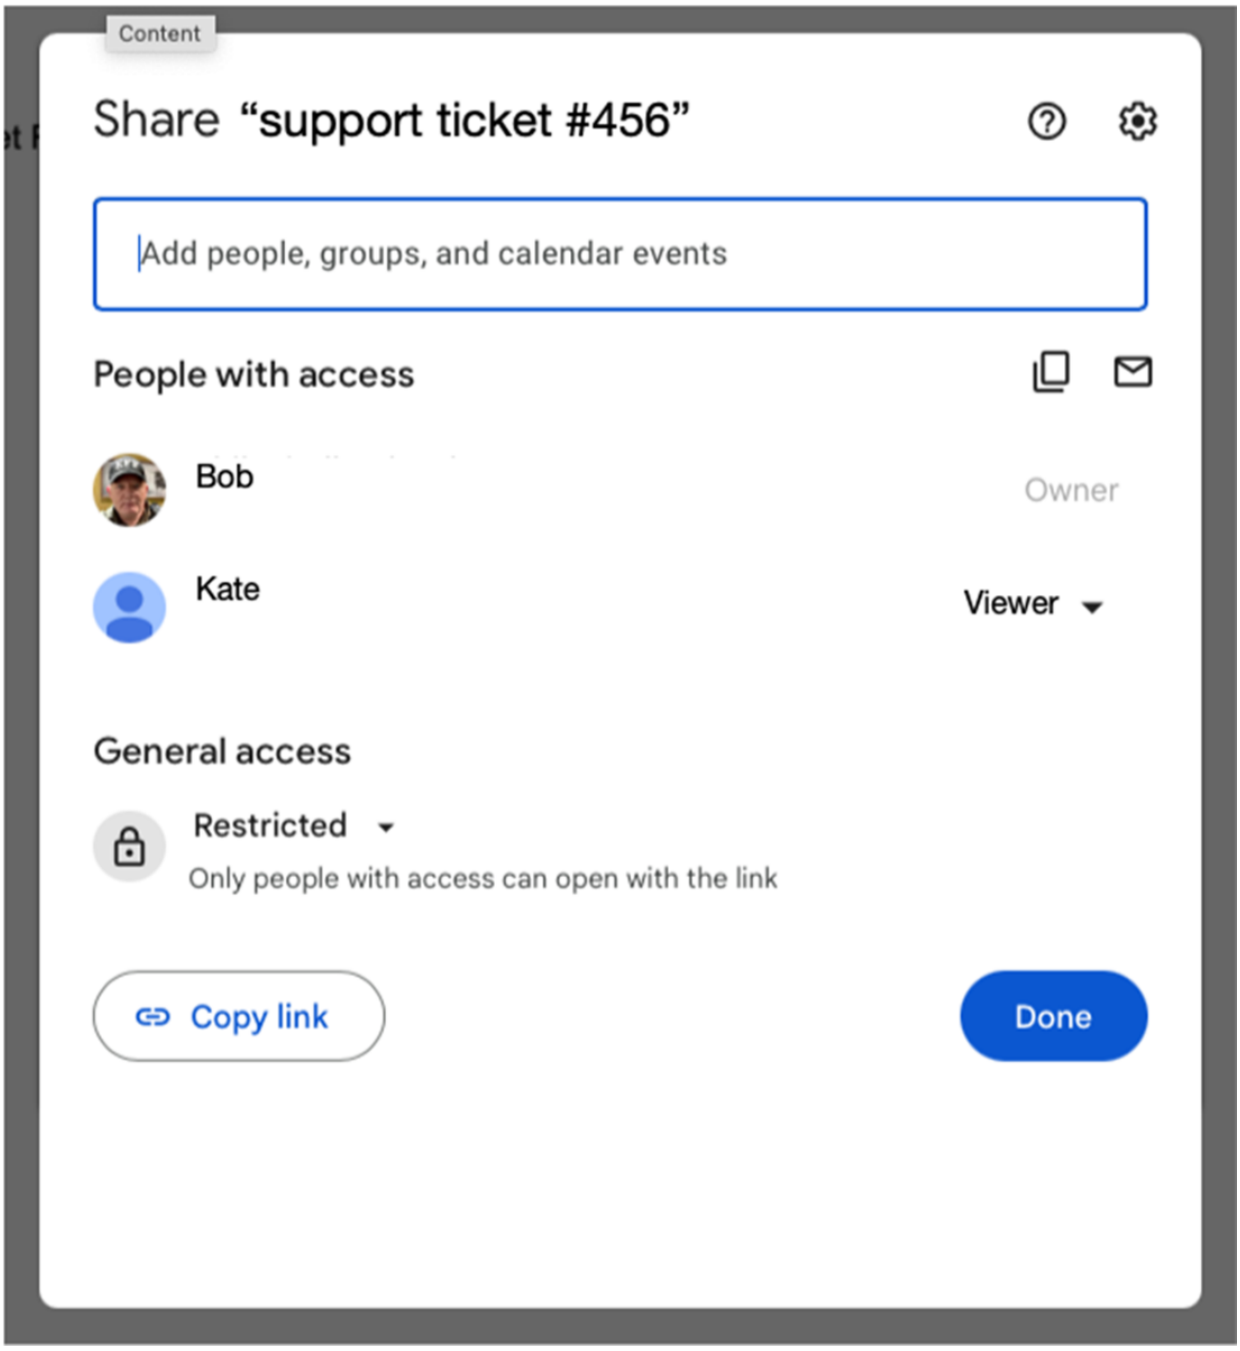

Figure 6.3 The user interface for the application provides users with the ability to affect access to documents by allowing them to change the relationship graph. In this figure, Bob is sharing “support ticket #456” with Kate, making her a Viewer.

Because the relationship graph is the primary source of policy data, any UI element that allows a person to change those relationships is effectively participating in policy administration. When an account manager shares a document with a customer or a team lead adds a new engineer to a project space, they’re updating the graph—and thereby changing the outcome of