Figure 10.5 shows how a brittle, title-based policy failed when Dan's role changed, unlike a stable team-based policy that kept functioning.

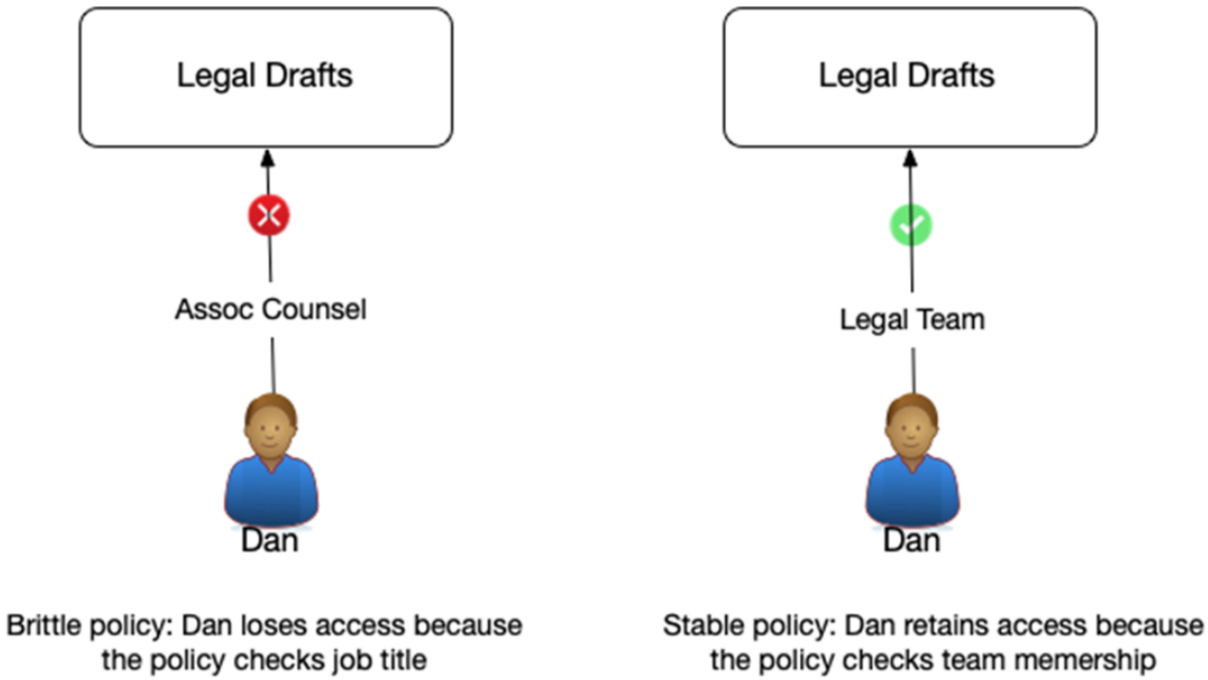

Figure 10.5 Brittle versus stable policies. A title check causes Dan to lose access after a promotion, while a team check maintains access because membership stays valid.

This example illustrates why team or project membership creates a more reliable basis for access decisions than unstable attributes like job titles.